Anne Miller provides business immigration counsel to employers, including domestic businesses hiring foreign talent and multinational companies transferring employees to the United States. She provides immigration solutions that support business objectives while maintaining regulatory compliance.

Anne advises employers on nonimmigrant visa options, including H-1B specialty occupation workers, L-1 intracompany transferees, O-1 individuals with extraordinary ability and TN professionals. She also guides companies through the PERM labor certification process. In addition, Anne supports companies with employment-based immigrant petitions that don't require labor certification, including those for multinational managers and executives (EB-1C), outstanding professors and researchers (EB-1B) and individuals with extraordinary ability (EB-1A). She also advises employers on workplace compliance matters, including Form I-9 and E-Verify compliance.
In addition to her employer-focused practice, Anne works with individuals and families on family-based petitions, permanent residence and citizenship matters, including representation at USCIS interviews.
